

Poe in the parlor: The English Honorary Sigma Tau Delta is hosting its first event in many years. The Honorary's president Matthew Early is hoping to get the club to be more active on campus. The event is being held in the library's colloquium center on October 22nd and will include a poetry-reading contest where the winner will receive a kindle fire. If a student wishes to compete in the contest the poetry/writing must be original it cannot from an established writer and it also must be a horror themed writing. However students can come and read writing from established poets or other writers but not compete or students can just come to listen and enjoy the spooky atmosphere.

Career services open house: Career Services Held an Open House on October 13th where students could come and learn what services they offer. Students could also get a treat when going to this open those treats included cotton candy and ice cream. Career services can help students with interviewing skills, forming a résumé, internships, and many other services.
